About Driscoll's

The Driscoll's berry company, founded in 1944, is third generation and still family-owned. Though they have eight cooling facilities and distribution centers in the U.S. alone, they do not grow berries themselves. Driscoll's harvests in southern and central California, Florida, the Pacific Northwest, Baja, Central Mexico and South America to keep supplies steady year round. All Driscoll's farmers around the world adhere to the same strict food safety guidelines, audits, inspections and documentation requirements established by the USDA and FDA.
