About Hudson River Fruit

Hudson River Fruit Distributors in Milton, N.Y. is one of the largest apple growers in this region. It was established in July 12, 1963, by Isadore "Izzy" Albinder, along with his son Harold Albinder. Izzy first entered the apple business back in 1932, after immigrating from Russia. He saw an opportunity to broker apples, so he bought a pushcart and sold apples in the neighborhood streets of Brooklyn, New York. As time went on he saw more and more opportunities in the Hudson Valley to not only sell apples but also to grow and pack his own. His son Harold entered the business full time in the late 1950's and together, Izzy and Harold purchased a packing house of their own. In 1967, they bought their first orchard, in order to provide better control of the apples they were selling. By 1972, with the purchase of their eighth orchard, they owned and operated over 1000 acres of cultivated land. Soon after Harold's son, Daniel Albinder, joined his father and grandfather in the business and together they continued to grow and expand the company. In 2013, Daniel's daughter Alisha joined the company full time making her the 4th generation owner/operator of Hudson River Fruit.
