About Martin's Farm

Martin Bournhonesque has farmed in and around the Salinas Valley of California since 1990. He has been producing at ALBA (Agriculture and Land-Based Training Association) since 2003 and also rents additional land in Soledad. These two areas allows him to farm different soil types and micro climates, which enables him to plant different crops best suited for each of these areas. With sustainability in mind, Martin adheres to environmentally sound farming practices such as chicken manure fertilizer, composting, removing crops when they have suffered pest damage, and crop rotation to keep herbivorous insects under control. He grows over 125 different varieties over the course of the year including peppers, eggplant, beans, root vegetables, and salad greens such as arugula, spinach, chard.
