STILL & SPARKLING WATERS

Acqua Panna

Established in 1564, Acqua Panna spring water follows the same path now as it did then: A 14-year journey from the aquifers beneath Tuscany's Apennine Mountains to the springs, resulting in a unique mineral balance and alkalinity that gives it a smooth taste. This water is found wherever excellent food is served, from Michelin-starred restaurants to rustic osterias.

Open Water

Female-owned Open Water focuses on taste rather than source. They have water-filtration centers across the country that consistently produce delicious, smooth-tasting water (with electrolytes and minerals), making customers happy and shortening the distance the water has to travel. Each lightweight aluminum can is 100% recyclable and 100% carbon neutral—it's our most sustainable water option.

Saratoga

The smooth flavor and low minerality of Saratoga's still and sparkling waters complement food instead of competing with it. For customers who like to support local, Saratoga has been sourced from the foothills of the Adirondacks for 150 years. The iconic blue bottles are produced there, too, with 100% of their electricity use offset with wind-power Renewable Energy Credits.

San Pellegrino

Like wine, spring water has "terroir": The flavor and mineral content comes from its unique environment. In the case of San Pellegrino, that starts in Italy's Dolomite Mountains and the roughly 30 years of travel through deep layers of porous rock before arriving at San Pellegrino's springs. The added carbon dioxide is what gives this sparkling water its signature slightly bitter finishing note.

SODAS & MIXERS

Galvanina

Turn to these sophisticated, organic Italian sodas when you want something off the beaten path. They're a delicious blend of thermal-spring mineral water and juice from tree-ripened fruits harvested in southern Italy and the Mediterranean Basin. With unexpected flavors like pomegranate, blood orange, clementine, and lemon, they feel special, as do the pretty glass bottles.

Spindrift

In the US, Spindrift was a pioneer in natural sodas—the sweetness comes only from real squeezed fruit. The company builds close relationships with farms and farmers to source the best-tasting (and traceable) fruit, and they let it shine in everything they make. Every can delivers a little pulp, big taste, light carbonation, and lots of satisfaction—no artificial colors or flavors ever.

Fever-Tree

Fever-Tree's motto is, "If $\frac{3}{4}$ of your drink is the mixer, mix it with the best." They are committed to quality and flavor: They use three varieties of ginger to make their nuanced ginger beer. Their club soda is clean and smooth, using spring water and a high level of carbonation—there's no aroma, so it lets the spirit shine.

Hella Mixers

Hella offers efficiency without compromise. Their Bloody Mary mixers have just the right bite and texture, and are made with ingredients you could find in your own kitchen, like 100% tomato juice, horseradish, Worcestershire, lemon, and black pepper. No artificial colors, flavors, MSG, or sodium benzoate.
